DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-16 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Alex et al., in view of Gross et al., and Kochamba.

Alex et al., discloses a housing, a mounting surface adapted for application to the skin of a subject, the mounting surface comprising a first portion and a second portion, adhesive means arranged in the first portion of the mounting surface, a needle comprising a distal pointed end adapted to penetrate the skin of the subject, wherein the second portion is moveable between a first position in which the pointed end of the needle is arranged within the housing relative to the second portion and a second position in which the pointed end of the needle projects through the needle aperture.

Alex et al., does not expressly disclose adhesive means on the second portion of the mounting surface. However, there is evidence in the art that demonstrates the conventionality of using adhesive throughout the entire base of a patch. In figures 3-6, the Gross et al., patent shows various embodiments of a drug delivery device having adhesive (6) in the entire base of the apparatuses. Based in this observation, for a person of ordinary skill in the art, modifying the injection device disclosed by Alex et al.,

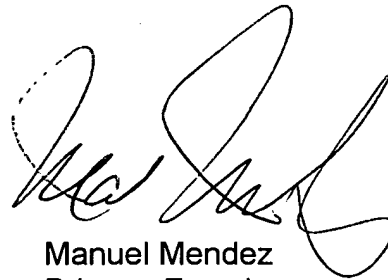

with adhesive in the first and second portions of the mounting surface would have been considered obvious in view of the conventionality of this enhancement.

The examiner of record has included the Kochamba patent to demonstrate the conventionality of drug delivery devices equipped with mechanisms that adhere the skin surface to the mounting surface, and consequently, force the skin to be raised from its natural level. The examiner would like to point out that whether it is an adhesive on the mounting surface that pulls the skin or a suction force, the result is basically the same. Accordingly, it is concluded that adhesives and suction would have been considered equivalent arts.
